

Aaron Johnson

Is the crime justice statistics advisor at the Thailand Institute of Justice. While in his current capacity he has written on developing a criminal justice database, gender statistics, as well as cybercrime. In addition to statistics, he focuses on rule of law. Currently a doctoral candidate majoring in political science at Northern Illinois University, Mr. Johnson's research explores the role of the judiciary in Thai politics and society. Prior to working at the TIJ, he was 2012-2013 Fulbright-Clinton Fellow working in the Thai Ministry of Justice conducting research on challenges facing the Thai prison system.

He has experience as a policy analyst at the U.S. Government Accountability Office and was an adjunct instructor of political science at the College of Staten Island. He received an MA in international Studies from the University of Sheffield, United Kingdom (2006) and BA in Political Science from Virginia Commonwealth University (2003).